Types of Interrogatives

- 1. Yes/No interrogatives are questions that can be answered with a yes or a no response. Example: Are you ready to go? (Yes I am ready to go) Did you go to the game Friday night?
- 2. Alternative interrogatives are questions that provide for two or more alternative answers. Example: Would you prefer chocolate or vanilla ice cream? Should I call or email you?
- 3. Wh-interrogative sentences begin with a wh-word and call for an open-ended answer. They begin with what, when, where, who, whom, which, whose, why and how. The answer can be a simple response or complex explanation. Example: What are you doing? Which songs do you like best?
- 4. Tag questions are questions attached or tagged onto the ending of a declarative statement. They transform a declarative sentence into an interrogative sentence. Example: You live in the city, don't you? We need to get going now, don't we?

10. (Although this is an indirect question, it is still a statement and, therefore, a declarative sentence.) Notice that none of these sentences asks a question, gives an order, or expresses strong emotion. I am no wine connoisseur, but I know what I like. Greece is home to many archaeological monuments 5. Look again at the last example. It makes a statement. This tells us that it is not a question. It doesn't ask a question. Here is information that will be tested on this page: 1. 2. interrogative, question mark? Please help me to climb down this tree. 5. Writing would be boring if it only consisted of simple sentences with the same word order. Could you please give me the hose? For native English speakers, there are two common writing issues related to declarative sentences. Brush up on this information so that you can rock out on the quiz. Interrogative sentences ask questions. (The word order is subject-verb: subject (he) then verb (is), i.e., the same as for a declarative sentence.) I want to know where is he. Please pass the lemonade. They end with periods. declarative 9. Example: The blue water in Greece is beautiful declarative, period. Declarative sentences simply make a statement (or a declaration). For example: Question Word Order: Where is he? Reading mythology will get you excited about traveling 9. Conversely, in an interrogative sentence (i.e., a question), the word order is usually switched to verb-subject. Declarative sentences are the most common type of sentence. The plant is green. (This is an interrogative sentence. * This is not a command. Kinds of Sentences + Punctuation Directions: Identify and label each sentence as declarative, interrogative, imperative, or exclamatory. Example: I love cats! exclamatory 1. OR exclamation mark! Would you like to download these grammar quizzes? Next lesson > What is a sentence? Exclamatory Sentence An exclamatory sentence expresses excitement or emotion. (These are not questions. Imperative sentences give commands. imperative * Note that even when you say please, this is still an imperative sentence. Where is my shovel? This is the most beautiful lawn I have ever seen. Subject: The rabbits Verb: eat Direct Object: vegetables Place: in the garden Time: in the early morning This is by no means a rule. Similarly, this is a strong trait of an interrogative sentence. It takes hard work to plant all of these flowers. I wonder if I can reach it? Great! Here we go. interrogative 2. (The statement word order is subject-verb: subject (he) then verb (is).) Indirect Question Word Order: I want to know where he is. Kinds of Sentences: Answers 1. 4. They pass on information. Interrogative Sentence An interrogative sentence asks a question. You will notice, however, that the subject-verb word order is maintained in both clauses ("the sun rises" and "the rabbits eat"). They usually end with periods, but they can also end with an exclamation mark. It ends with an exclamation mark (!). (This is a declarative sentence. It would be a command if it said, Read Greek mythology. Look at these two examples: Rachel is Irish. The word order is subject-verb.) Is Rachel Irish? imperative, period Water the plant! 4. This point overlaps with Issue 1. 9. Only a direct question does. 7. My arms ache from digging the flower beds! 5. There's more on this to come. declarative 8. You should read Greek mythology 6. Come with us 1. I am going to climb that tree. 1. They end with question marks. I can't get down! 10. Here is an example of a complex sentence: just before the sun rises, the rabbits eat the vegetables in the garden. The usual word order for a simple declarative sentence is subject-verb-object-place-time. exclamatory, exclamation mark ! 3. Declarative sentences make statements. Greek mythology is full of adventures and legends 7. declarative 3. It is, in fact, an indirect question.) Read more about indirect questions. It ends with a question mark (?). I never knew I could enjoy teaching this so much!- Ann, Classroom Teacher Would you like to download these grammar quizzes? For example: The rabbits eat the vegetables in the garden in the early morning. The most common mistake related to declarative sentences is using a question mark at the end of a sentence that isn't a question. The word order of an indirect question is the same word order as a declarative sentence (subject-verb) not a question (verb-subject). Kinds of Sentences Directions: Identify and label each sentence as declarative, interrogative, imperative, or exclamatory. 1. I am so excited 3. I love this plant! Are you ready to get started with the quiz? The boss has asked when the party starts? For example: I am an expert in French cheeses. Would you like to download these grammar quizzes? What is an imperative sentence? Mark wants to know whether he was selected? 6. (The word order of "whether I liked her dress" is subject-verb ("I"-liked"). statement, period. Here are some examples of other sentence types: Imperative Sentence An imperative sentence is a command or a polite request. interrogative 7. You may be commanding someone politely, but you are still commanding them. Enjoy! This Quiz Covers... Are you learning or teaching the four types of sentences? What is an interrogative sentence? Write the correct punctuation mark after each sentence. 8. What is an indirect question? The word order is verb-subject.) Let's look at this example again: She asked whether I liked her dress. What is an exclamatory sentence? For example: Fetch my umbrella! Please bring my umbrella. My students are enjoying the Get Smart program so much. This quiz cover the four types of sentences. They end with exclamation marks. Do I have to water the plant? imperative 2. 3. (It is a mistake to use question word order in an indirect question.) Key Points An indirect question does not warrant a question mark. A declarative sentence does not ask a question ("Do you like cheese?"), give an order (e.g., "Pass the cheese."), or express strong emotion (e.g., "I hate cheese!"). She asked whether I liked her dress. There should be no question marks.) Look at the word order: "The boss has asked..." (subject-verb) "I wonder..." (subject-verb) "Mark wants..." (subject-verb) These are clearly declarative sentences not questions (i.e., interrogative sentences). Exclamatory sentences express emotion. For example: You've broken my umbrella! Declarative sentences are by far the most common type of sentence. The view from the top of this tree is amazing. This is a strong trait of the declarative-sentence structure. Water the plant.
